Contour Line Drawing

On Thursday, we will begin working on our stencils for our cladogram animals and nodes. To prepare for this, you will draw a contour line drawing of your animal (and node, if you are assigned one).

A contour line means a line that follows all of the contours of an object. You can think of it following just the outline. Your contour line should clearly show what kind of animal you have. If you are having difficulty drawing a contour line and would like to trace a picture, you may do so.

Add as much detail as you can to your contour line. Remember, these drawings need to be realistic, not cartoonish.

If you are assigned a node, draw your contour line of your node's trait below. Remember, your drawing should be of the trait itself, not of an animal.
